The steepest of the glaciers hindered skiing. The large crevasses sometimes prevented the party from keeping a direct course; nevertheless they climbed 4,500 feet in two days and descended upon a huge glacier on the third day. On the fourth they began another ascent. Crevasses again hindered them. Many of these were apparently filled, but the explorers took no chances.

The explorers took only four days from the barrier to reach a height of 10,600 feet. There they had to kill twentyfour dogs, but eighteen remained. The bad weather also stopped their advance for four days.

The party started again on November 25, but the next day everything was blotted out by a tremendous blizzard. The party was surprised to find that the hypsometer recorded a descent of feet. On the [following day, although they were in no peril, they suffered from frozen faces and obscured

When the party reached 86 degrees the hypsometer showed a descent of 800 feet. The next day there were similar conditions. The snow momentarily cleared. however, and there was a view of a great mountain range to the east.

On December 17 the party pitched a tent from which they flew the Norwegian flag. They had reached 90 degrees south. The average day's march to this point had been 23 kilometers.

The explorers started back the same day and made good going under favorable conditions. They reached winter quarters on January 25 with two sledges and eleven dogs, having done 36 kilometers a day on the return trip.

Capt. Amundsen sums up the principal by results of the expedition as:

First, the determining of the extent of the Ross Barrier.

Second, ascertaining the apparent connection of South Victoria Land and King Edward Land and the huge mountain ranges therein, which probably continue across the whole continent. He named them Queen Maud's ranges. Third, the exploration of part of King

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
LONDON, March 8.—The Royal Geographical Society accepts unqualifiedly Capt. Roald Amundsen's claim that he has reached the south pole and takes it for granted that he was the first explorer to reach the pole, although Amundsen's brief despatch does not mention that fact.

Geographers point out, however, that Capt. Amundsen and Capt. Robert F. Scott may both have been there and within a few miles of each other without knowing it. Scientists are awaiting further details before accepting definitely the defeat of the British expedition. According to a Hobart special to the Daily Express Captain Amundsen landed from the Fram at Hobart, Tasmania, for a brief period to-day but positively refused to make any statement regarding vision on account of the gale driven his achievements. He made it very plain, however, that he will not wait long to submit his proofs that he actually discovered the pole, but will send them to the various geographical societies in the near future.

The situation is admitted on all hands to be serious and while there is a general aversion among operators and dealers to placing themselves in an attitude which will create a scarce, the likelihood of a coal famine this summer is conceded.

The winter has been the most severe in two decades and the consumption consequently has been enormous. The added handicap of bad weather, which to a large degree crippled the transportation facilities, resulted in the mines being worked scarcely more than half time, so the supply was exhausted almost as rapidly as it could be handled.

Some of the large manufacturing and other concerns which use a great deal of the small steam sizes of anthracite have contracts ahead with the companies, which they say will have to be filled.

W. B. McQueen, sales manager of the Quemahoning Casek Coal Company. 30 Broad street, said that the soft coal situation is in the same condition as the anthracite situation—people clamoring for bituminous coal at a premium. The price of soft coal was advancing owing simply to the demand caused by the fear of a strike.

THE CHINA FAMINE.

Families Eating Elm Bark-City of Paoting-fu Destroyed.

The China famine relief committee of New York has received the following report on conditions in North Kiang-su: "Fifty-five homes were visited in several country villages. SUFFRAGETTES RIOT IN HOLLOWAY JAIL Fight Wardresses and Break Machines; End Up in Punishment Cells.

ALICE WRIGHT CAN'T BE SEEN

London Prison Authorities Refuse Any Privileges to Window Smasher From Albany.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN fragettes bitterly resent the action of the authorities in sentencing them to hard labor. By way of vengeance they have been setting Holloway jail in an uproar Led by Alice Wright, the Albany, N. Y. girl who came from Paris to assist in the vindow breaking campaign and upon whom a two months sentence was imposed, although the majority of her accomplices got only thirty days, the uffragettes have defied the prison officers.

When the women were ordered into the robing room to take off their street clothing, bathe and don the prison garments they rebelled. The women warders of Holloway prison are chosen for their muscular ability rather than for good looks, and they started to make the prisoners obey the prison rules.

While details are difficult to obtain, it is said that the riot that followed was the worst in the recent history of the prison. Two of the wardresses had their clothing torn almost completely from their bodies and they had to put the riotous prisoners in handcuffs to subdue them and make them take their baths and put on the prison uniforms. Afterward when the suffragette leaders were ordered into the workroom to sew on bags in accordance with the prison rules and the terms of their sentence another row followed. At a given signal all the suffragettes jumped up. Those who were working at machines tore them apart as well as they could without tools and for a time the entire workroom was in an uproar.

Finally the wardresses regained control railroads, some of whom are dumping of the situation. The suffragettes were coal on the right of way for storage purward the prison governor ordered the ringleaders in the disturbance to be placed in solitary confinement, where, it is understood, they still are. Solitary confinement is severe under the rules of Holloway prison. The solitary cells are underground and are very dismal places. It is said also that they are very cold. While friends of Miss Wright fear that she is undergoing the "solitary," it is impossible to ascertain the facts. Reporters made formal application to the prison commissioners for an order to see the American girl The application was curtly refused. "Under no circumstances will any one one until they have completed their term.
